Deaf but not bed of roses for alumni

BY ANDRE GLAZER
The Daily
The University of Michigan, this newly minted alumna of the 1974-75 class, is a woman of many parts. She has a degree in English, a minor in French, and is fluent in sign language.

The Daily is a campus newspaper. It is the official student publication of the University of Michigan, a public research university located in Ann Arbor, Michigan. The Daily was founded in 1868 and is published daily except during university breaks. It covers news, sports, and events at the university, as well as local and national issues. The Daily is a student-operated publication, with a staff of approximately 100 students.

The Daily website offers a variety of content, including news, sports, opinion, and community sections. It also provides an archiving service for past issues of the newspaper, allowing readers to search for articles or browse through past editions. The Daily is known for its coverage of campus events, academics, and student life.

The Daily is supported by advertising revenue and is distributed across the campus and through local vendors. The newspaper is a valuable resource for students, faculty, and the local community, providing news and information about the University of Michigan and its activities.